TAKING THE AIR.

Old Al Falfa has read of the prize offered for a new altitude record, so, after being annoyed by the mice, he attempts to claim it. He goes to a cliff edge. There he sits on a chair, opens an umbrella, and pushes off with disastrous results.

However, he is not down hearted, and, after knocking the wheels off of his flivver, he sails again upward on the car. A mouse who is also after the title meekly asks the aloft Al, " How are you going to get down? " Al gets down when his machine blows up.

He receives his prize, a bag of money, which turns out to be a lot of mice.

AESOP SAYS:-

" A MAN WHO NEVER RODE A DONKEY OUGHT TO GET ON TO HIMSELF."
